At the same time, newspapers and politicians speculated that the government, the nation's 36th since the fall of Fascism, may collapse under the mounting eco-

Italy's foreign payments deficit is running at more than $1 hil-lion a month. The figure, indicating the difference between money flowing out to pay for goods and services bought abroad and the carnings from what Italy sells to other nations, is unprecedented for this country. Furthermore. Italy has the largest foreign debt among all major industrial nations.

Guldo Carli, head of the Bank of Italy, disclosed that Italy has borrowed $10.5 billion abroad during the last two years and that it now has to pay $700 million a year in interest alone. He made it plain that Italy's credit is all but exhausted.

Gold Holdings

Mr. Carli pointed out that the central bank is holding more than 2,500 tons of gold. Its value at the official rate, nearly $3.5 billion, would jump to more than $16 billion at present gold prices on the free market, a reserve that might tide Italy over its present

Italy has suggested to other Western nations and to the International Monetary Fund that it be authorized to revalue a part of its gold holdings. The prob-lem will be discussed when central bank chiefs meet in Washington next week.

The European Economic Com-munity also is considering how it might help. However, West German and other Common Market officials are known to be highly critical of Italian economic and social policies, which, they assert, have contributed to the present emergency.

Mr. Carli, in a recent review of the economic situation, said the crisis was to a great extent, but by no means exclusively, caused by the enormously increased cost of crude off. The bank governor's statement also criticized government inefficiency, public spending and organized labor.

Split Shows In Military In Portugal

By Richard Eder

MSBON, June 7 (NYT) .- A week of political barnstorming around the country by provisional President Antonio de Spinola has strengtheoed the impression that military structure underpinning the regime is under-going some considerable strains.

Gen. Spinola, other senior officers and some of the younger olficers who took part in the coup share a concern that Portugal's new freedom is getting out of hand and that Communists and other extreme leftist groups are making too much headway.

On the other hand, a number of leading members of the Military Movement, the name given to the group of 300 or so young officers who carried out the coup, are worried that Gen. Spinola, a man of conservative views, is buliding up his own power and that of the regular military hierarchy in such a way as to put an end to their own influence. There are reports that Movement officers have beld one or more large meetings in the last few days to discuss the situation. Two officers who are in touch with Movement leaders confirmed this today.

Too Presidential?

One of the officers described the subject of discussion as "the concern that Spinola is behaving like a president instead of like a provisional president."

During the first weeks after the coup, despite intense activity, Gen. Spinola remained out of the public eye. But in the last week he has visited four cities, conferring with the local military commanders and addressing enormous crowds.

Yesterday, for example, in the city of Evora, he repeated the theme of other speeches; that the army would not permit the freedom won in the April 25 coup to be exploited by extremists or by ambitious political groups.

"We respect all political groups. we respect all true politicians as a source of opinions of discussions, but not as a source of pressure upon our people," be said. "We overthrew a dictatorship, we will not consent to the imposition of new dictatorships."

Although Gen. Spinola named two Communist party leaders to the cabinet and although the party has played a major part in helping the government damp down labor agitation, the general is reportedly concerned by the organizing energy shown by the party and by extreme leftists.

Speech to Council

Perhaps his most significant speech, and the one that has most worried the young officers, was delivered Saturday when he swore in the Council of State. The council, which has quasilegislative functions in the provisional government, includes seven officers representing the Military Movement.

The Movement regards itself as the guardian of the coup. Its members say that it must remain

Kleindienst Gets Jail Term, Fine; Both Suspended

By Anthony Ripley

WASHINGTON, June 7 (NYT).—Former Attorney General Richard Eleindlenst, weeping openly, today received a suspended sentence of a month in prison and a $100 fine for misleading a Senate committee that was investigating the International Telephone & Telegraph

Chief U.S. District Judge George Hart jr. ordered the suspended sentence and placed Kleindienst on one month's unsupervised probation. He said that Eleindienst was a man of "highest integrity," but one who has "a heart that is too loyal."

Kleindienst. 50, turned from the judge's bench, eyes wet, and left the courtroom immediately. He later told reporters gathered outside the courthouse that he had never lied to the Senate Judiclary Committee and that the ITT matter had been properly bandled by the Justice Department.

'In My Heart' ' As I stand here today. I never ich in my heart that I perjured myself," Kleindienst said. He pleaded guilty on May 16 to a misdemeanor charge of refusing to answer questions put to him by members of the Senate Judiciary Committee in March and April, 1972 Kleindienst did, in fact, answer the questions involved in his indictment. However, subsequent events indicated he had failed to tell the truth.

The logic of the charge drawn by special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski was that, because Kleindienst had falled to answer "accurately." he had not answered the questions.

Mr. Jaworski's move, which he discussed with former special prosecutor Archibald Cox, has brought him considerable criticism and ignited a major internal explosion on the special prosecutor's stall. Three lawyers working on the ITT investigation quit.

Judge Hart said Kleindienst would have brought "great credit" on himself had be answered questions accurately but that such action might have brought "diseredit on another individual." Speaking to reporters later, Kleindieust said he was "very humbled and very flattered" at Judge Hart's remarks. He said he had done his duty day." Pressed on why he had not told the schators the truth about the telephone call from President Nixon ordering him to drop the appeal of the ITT anti-trust case,

"The direct question was never put to me."

A Eesponse

On March 8, 1972, in response to a question from a Senate Judiciary Committee member, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Kicindlenst stated: "In the discharge of my responsibilities as the acting attorney general in these [TTT] cases, I was not interfered with by anybody at the White House. I was not importuned. I was not pressured. I was not directed." Kleindienst acknowledged when he cutered the guilty plea that 'I was less than candid" with the committee 'because I viewed the President's order as ill-con-ceived, quickly retracted, in my opinion privileged and, in any event, not the focus of the committee's inquiry."

But, he said, "I was wrong... and I sincerely regret it."

Judge Assails Nixon Bar on Files Access

Gesell Warns Again In Ehrlichman Case

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON, June 7 (IHT). -Federal Judge Gerhard Gesell today denounced as "totally offensive and bordering on obstruction" President Nixon's refusal to obey a court order and to abide by an agreement over access to the files of former top White House side John Ehrlichman, Judge Gesell made the comnicht at the close of a hearing that could lead to a contempt citation against President Nixon. The judge added that he will rule quickly on the matter.

The judge opened the hearing after Mr. Nixon's chief Water-gate attorney, James St. Clair, again repeated Mr. Nixon's refusal to surrender material subpoenaed by Mr. Ehrlichman.

The material in question consists of handwritten notes and other documents in personal files of the former number two White House aide, indicted with five others on charges connected with the September, 1971, burglery of the office of Daniel Elisberg's psychiatrist. The trial is scheduled to begin June 17.

Judge Gesell denied, for the time being, a motion to dismiss charges against Mr. Enrichman, who has custody of these docu-ments so I can take appropriate action under contempt statutes."

In previous hearings, the judge has said that he might have to dismiss charges against the de-fendants if the White House does not turn over the material. But today hc said, "Dismissal, that the President's actions seem to be pointing toward, is a course I should not follow until I have exhausted every other possibility.

As today's session began, Mr. Ehrlichman's attorneys told the judge that the White House had refused to turn over all of the suppoensed files and notes. Judge Gesell then demanded to know whether Mr. St. Clair would produce the material as ordered. "I do not produce, the President does," the attorney shot back. "I have no authority to go beyond what the President di-

Mr. Nixon was discussing the Watergate investigation with Assistant Attorney General Henry Petersen on April 17, 1973, when the possibility that members of his staff would be indicted

According to the White House transcript of the conversation, Mr. Nixon asked Mr. Petersen to explain what was meant by unindicted co-conspirator.

Mr. Petersen: That just means that for one reason or another we don't want to charge them at the time. For example. I am indicted-you're named as an unindicted coconspirator. Dissenting Views The new estimates carry dissenting views from within the intelligence community as an integral part of their texts. In the old system, dissents were register-

The preponderance of the mili-tary, even after Congress slashed 9,000 posts from the Defense Intelligence Agency last year, coes not worry Mr. Colby.

He hired Maj. Gen. Daniel vice made or sold, economists now are concerned that some fundamental economic institutions may tumble, causing "massive economic disruption. For example, Mr. Greenspan warned that savings and loans and mutual sarings banks, which finance much of the nation's housing, may face severe prob-lems. With short-term interest rates minning at 9 percent to 9 1 2 percent, they are barely able to relain deposits, he said. Such institutions, which are limited by law in the interest rates they may pay would be threatened with "classive withdrawals amounting to tens of bilhons of dollars" if short-term rates moved close to 15 percent,

Mr. Greenspan said. In general, the economists blanied the government for at least part of the initiation. They said government borrowing and government - guaranteed borrowing to pay for social programs were dominating the long-term empital markets, which provide the benchmark for other ınarkets. But the real roots of inflatiou, Mr. Sommers said, lay in a "profound historical shift in the social conditions and value systems of democratic capitalism.

"Modern economic systems in the free world are living in an explosion of expectations that carry the demands for output far beyond their finite resources," he

The failure of our political system to contain the growth of social demands within limits tolerable to the free market is the essential first cause of inflation in this society," he added.

As for solutions to inflation, the economists offered some proposals which they said could modify the consequences of inflation and perlups "buy time." Among these were suggestions for more restrictive monetary and federal budgetary policies. There also was some sentiment in favor of wage and price guidelines, although not for rigid controls. A real solution can only be found in a change of attitudes. Mr. Sommers asserted. "Because we have placed the ultimate causes of inflation in a political and social tide, it is in political and social attitudes that we must hope for the ultimate adjustments," he said.

Nixon Envoy Reassures EE On Quick Action on Trade Bi

BRUSSELS, June 7 (IHT):---President Nixon's special trade representative. William Eberle, today expressed confidence that the trade bill currently before the Senate Finance Committee would be ready this eummer.

The bill has passed the House but is being held up in the Senate principally because of a dispute over giving most-favorednation status to Russia. Unless it is approved the United States cannot take part in the proposed miltilateral trade-liberalization talks in which 105 nations would negotiate. The bill would give President Nixon the authority he needs to make tariff deals at the talks with other countries belonging to the General Agreement on Tariffs' and Trade.

Mr. Eberle was apeaking at the end of two days of consultations with a team of European Economic Community officials led by Str Christopher Soames, in which a whole range of trade, energy and anvironment problems were discussed.

Addressing a joint press conference in the European Com-mission beadquarters, the Presi-dent's envoy said, 'The multi-lateral trade talks are more important now than when it was initially decided they should take place. Although there are a num-ber of difficult problems yet to be solved, I think the bill will be ready as soon as possible."
Sir Christopher, who is responsible for EEC external relations, said the two days of consultation had been "particularly success-ful." Mr. Eberlo said the at-mosphere was "exceptionally good." He noted that the main problem which has vexed EEC-U.S. relations for the last 12 months—the question of the exthe United States following the community's enlargement from six to him nations—had been

Mr. Haldeman and Mr. Ehrlichman are two of the six former presidential aides indicted for the Watergate cover-up.

No Question' of Source Two sources close to Mr. Ehrlichman have said recently that he has made it clear that at least part of his legal expenses will be paid by persons close to the White House. In the words of one source, "There was no question in conversations with Mr. Ehrlichman] that it was to be paid and that Nixon had ar-ranged it or at least helped ar-

White House deputy press secretary Gerald Warren said today that although Mr. Nixon offered to help his two aides raise money to pay their legal fees, he never followed through on the promise and never took any action to set up a defense fund for them. Mr. Warren specifically denied that a $400,000 fund was established and held by Mr. Rebozo.

John Wilson, the attorney for Mr. Haldeman and until earlier this year for Mr. Ehrlichman as well, said that he was unaware of any such arrangement to pay the legal fees through a secret fund by Mr. Rebozo or anyone else. said: "We've received no fees yet... we're keeping time cards." He said that he would only accept fees from the personal funds of his clients or from a legitimately established trust fund.

Under normal circumstances, there is nothing illegal about the payment by anyone of legal fees for dependents in a criminal trial. However, the office of the special Watergate prosecutor has charged in the cover-np indictment that payments made in 1972 and 1973 to the seven original Watergate defendants were illegal hecause the money was allegedly paid to buy the silence of the defendants.

Mr. Higby's reported testimony is the first indication that the cover-up defendants may be getting outside support from those close to Mr. Nixon. Reli-able sources said that Mr. Higby told the committee he had informed Mr. Haldeman recently that he was going to testify about the offer to pay the fees and that Mr. Haldeman reassumed to him that Mr. Nixon had made such

Lawyer Replaced

According to sources close to Mr. Ehrlichman, Mr. Wilson was replaced after Mr. Ehrlichman concluded that he could not get full representation from an attorney who was also handling Mr. Haldeman's case. In his place, Mr. Ehrlichman hired Mr. Frates, a Miami attorney who has been representing Mr. Rebozo in the Senate committee's investigation of a $100,000 cash contribution from billionaire Howard Hughes, Mr. Rebozo has testified that he kept the $100,000 for three years before returning it.

The Senate committee interviewed Mr. Higby, the sources said, as part of its investigation of White House involvement with the Hughes contribution. Mr. Nixon's former personal attorney, Herbert Kalmbach, has that Mr. Rebozo told him that some of the $100,000 was either loaned or given to Rose Mary Woods, the President's personal secretary, Donald Nixon, one of the President's brothers, and others.

Mr. Rebozo has denied Mr. Kalmbach's claims and the Secate committee is continuing its investigation.

News Analysis

Grand Jury's Action May Hurt

WASHINGTON, June 7 (NYT). -The naming of President Nixon as an unindicted co-conspirator in the Watergate cover-up is not. legally, the intrinsically significant act that his indictment would be. Unlike an indictment, it gives Mr. Nixon no new clearcut rights and duties, no right to a trial, no duty to plead to the

But it has significance for Mr. Nixon and the six defendants as well And for all seven, the implications seem largely negative

The naming of Mr. Nixon gives the prosecution an advantage in the trial of the six cover-up defendants, by making it easier for the prosecution to use certain

It probably means that Mr. Nixon cannot escape his present problems by resigning unless he first makes a deal with the prosecution, such as the arrangeformer Vice-President Spiro Agnew made.

Subpoenas Resisted It may also mean that Mr. Nixon's case in resisting the prosecution subpoenss, which some consider weak, may become even weaker. It may also have some effect on the impeachment proceedings for it could heighten public opinion against the President. These implications stem mainly from two things-what the naming of someone as an unindicted evidence against the person, and the law of conspiracy. Unindicted co-conspirators are often named in conspiracy prosecutions. As Ronald Goldfarh, a lawyer here and a former Justice Department official, said: They're not innocent passersby." They are persons against whom the prosecution has at least some incriminating evidence.

An Arrangement

Sometimes, a grand jury does not have sufficient evidence to indict. Sometimes, the prosecution agrees to an arrangement in which an individual will testify against the other accused conspirators in return for which he or she will not be prosecuted. The prosecution may name such a person an unindicted coconspirator to take advantage of a rule of law that allows evidence about one conspirator to be used against another, or, as Mr. Goldfarb noted, the prosecutor may want to "smear" the person. This is not a particularly acceptable or common practice, but it does seem to occur.

The reports about the Watergate grand jury's action in Mr. Nixou's case indicate another possibility. According to some sources, the jurors voted to name the President an unindicted coconspirator because they had originally wanted to indict him, but the special Watergate prosecutor, Leon Jaworski, had advised them that indictment of an incumbent President raised legal

The problems for the six remaining cover-up defendants arose because of an aspect of the law on conspiracy cailed the coconspirator rule.

The rule says that, once a conspiracy is shown to exist and certain persons are shown to be involved in it, acts or statements that any conspirator makes "in furtherance" of a conspiracy are attributable to the other con-

According to Daniel Rezneck a Washington lawyer who is expert in criminal defense matters, the showing" that must be made before the rule is applied—the showing that a conspiracy exists and that certain persons were in it-is only a "prima facie" show-It need not be proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

In the cover-up case, Mr. Rezneck suggested, the tape of Mr. Nixon's conversation on March 21, 1973, in which he discussed hush money payments, might be enough for a prima facie showing that Mr. Nixon was a co-

Once the showing is made, the prosecution can introduce evidence of things Mr. Nixon may have said regarding the culpability of any defendant. The only condition is that Mr. Nixon must have made the statement in a conversation "in furtherance" of the conspiracy, and, according to Mr. Rezneck, courts bave been "generous" in their interpretations of what is "in furtherance" of a conspiracy.

The defendants cannot argue that they did not know of or agree to Mr. Nixon's statements or acts, because as Mr. Rezneck put it, under the rule each conspirator is "deemed" to act for

If Mr. Nixon is impeached for his alleged part in the conspiracy and then acquitted by the Senate, defense counsel in the cover-up trial can argue that the co-conspirator rule does not apply.

Most U.S. Oil Companies Tap Big Profits to Raise Salaries

Most of the nation's major oil companies are using some of their record profits to raise employee salaries, according to a survey taken by the Associated Press. One company, for example, is giving workers a bonus of a month's salary. The survey shows that Exxon, Mobil, Standard of California, Continental, Standard of Indiana. Shell. Atlantic Richfield and Union are raising the salaries of nonunion U.S. employees, Some are offering pay increases to union employees as well.

Most of the increases by these oil companies were 6 percent raises. Mobil was the only company to gire a one-time bonus of one month's pay, which meant really $900 in each to many workers.

Most of the companies would not say immediately how much the pay increases would cost. Union oil workers currently earn ohout $11,500 a year, according to the Oil, Chemical and Alomic Workers Union, The Mobil bonn... presuming the average employee makes $11,500 a year, would come to about $32 million.

Rawleigh Warner jr., chairman of Mohil, said that the boouses were being given because of company coucern that juffation was croding the salaries of its em-ployees. He said Mobil fell the lump-sum bonus would be more useful to employees than a raise. He said the bonus vould go to all 37,000 employees except the company directors, Alobil is also negotiating with the OCAW about distribution to union employees.

Asked if the bonuses were being given to reduce the size of uncoming secood-quarter profits. a Mobil spokesman saio: "Definitely not. A Continental Oil spokesman said its 6 percent increase for its 13,000 white-collar employees was strictly to meet the cost of living and had nothing lo do with higher carnings or an attempt to soften second-quarter profits. It has not raised union

End of 'Foreign Aid'

America's future role in the world would of South Vietnam with military supplies as be better served if the phrase "foreign aid" could be dispensed with. Outmoded in its origins and implications, the notion thus expressed gives a misleading impression.

When Secretary of State Kissinger went to Capitol Hill this week to argue for the administration's foreign aid package, he was greeted with personal respect and political skeptlelsm. It is because of habit and traditional legislative organization that the programs under discussion are lumped together under one heading—and an unpopular and easy-to-knock heading at that. The only responsible way of passing judgment on this relatively small slice of the national budget is to break it open and measure each of its various components on its own merits.

That India has diverted some of its precious resources into nuclear development may dismay many in this country; but this is no excuse for ignoring the legitimate agricultural and monetary needs of the Indian government. Oil-producing states may be on the verge of sudden riches; but this does not negate the U.S. interest in helping to channel the economic growth of other developing countries along the most effective and humane lines. There may be honest hesitation when Mr. Kissinger invokes a "moral obligation" to assist the government well as economic aid, especially to the extravagant tune of $2.4 billion.

But dissatisfaction with any specific ald projects cannot undermine the fundamental principle that a share of America's wealth can be employed to strengthen the international economic and political order. The independent Overseas Development Council, which is doing some of the most sophisticated analyses of world economic relations, points out that "countries are more likely to cooperate with the international systems upon which we depend if they are achieving their development goals than if they are failing to do so." Furthermore, the process of orderly economic development will alieviate some of the most troubling problems such as food scarcity, overpopulation and the need for broader markets for world products. And, obviously, there is simply inherent danger in a world of increasing disparity between the rich and the poor.

President Nixon argued this week in his address at the Naval Academy that "Amerlcan power and American resolve" are the essential elements for world peace. He could well have added the element of American understanding of the difference between charity and investment for mutual benefit.

They Had a Little List

Another part of the clanking, rusty machinery of the post-war "antl-subversive" drive was consigned to the junk heap the other day; at the recommendation of Attorney General William Saxbe, President Nixon-by executive order-did away with the notorious "Attorney General's List." Since people of a certain—teoder—age will probably regard that news as being about as topical as a dispatch from the Punic wars, a little elaboration might be in order. For some people will never forget the ordeal of which the promulgation of that list was but a part. Unlike the "enemies list" of wblch we have all heard so much lately, the execntive order authorizing the Attorney General's List was official, public and far-reaching in the damage it threatened to individuals, organizations and-needless to saythe Constitution itself. Basically it comprised a grant of authority to the attorney general to designate certain groups and organizations as "subversive;" and membership, past or present, in such a group was used as a measure of a person's fitness for security clearance and government employweapon of smear against individuals. It had features of a bill of attainder.

Like so much of the other "security" apparatus of the period, including much of the misbegotten legislation, the order authorizing the attorney general to compile such a list ran into trouble with the Supreme Court. The court held that organizations could not be listed by the attorney general without benefit of due process-of a hearing. And-as it was with subsequent legislation intended to compel certain groups to register as "Comumist-front," "Communistaction" and so on-the legal effort to make this unworkable and constitutionally offensive system function proved too tiresome in the and for the enforcers.

It has been almost 20 years since any new groups were added to the list. Most of those that originally graced it have long been defunct. Some were removed as a consequence of lawsuits. A few years ago. President Nixon made a pass at reviving the list and putting it in a contemporary context by transferring it to the jurisdiction of the Subversive Activities Control Board. But that dldn't go anywhere: The board, at least as obnoxious an heirloom as the list. bas since gone out of business itself.

No one should think these developments mark the dawn of a new day in which cur civil liberties may be taken for granted. Events and revelations of the past few years have demonstrated for all who care to see that government is ever capable of devisment. It was, of course, also used as a ing new and different means for encroaching on the rights of individuals. But the uhmourned passing of the postwar laws and regulations that did such violence to the nation's protected freedoms, does (like the Watergate experience) say much that is reassuring about the regenerative powers of the American people's good sense and the vitality of the Constitution.

A Test for Sen. Jackson

Soviet Jewish emigration to Israel ran at 3.900 a month in 1973, 2.400 in 1974, 1.550 in February, 1,720 in March, 1,600 in April and 1.226 in May, the lowest figure in almost three years. The decline is hard and cruel evidence that the Soviet government will not be pushed past a certain point by Sen. Henry Jackson, who leads a powerful drive in the Senate to prevent President Nixon from expanding or even maintaining trade with Russia until the Russians allow free Jewish emigration. The figures say that the Russlans are prepared to be just as tough as the senator. If he is going to slow trade. they are going to slow emigration. Mr. Jackson could earlier take deserved credit for mustering the political pressure to keep Jewish emigration flowing. But the pressure is backfiring.

More than the rate of emigration and the scale of trade is at stake. The United States and Russla are at a pivot in their whole mutual effort to moderate and regularize our relations in a naw pattern. The squeeze on trade embodled in the Jackson amendment, and the comparable Soviet squeeze on emigration, indicate that on both sides the political constituencies supporting détente are on the defensive. If this hurdle is not lowered hy mutual compromise, the momentum of the Nixon policy may flag and Americans and Russians may sllp back into the limited fits and starts of earlier years. The ring of détente does not come around every spring.

President Nixon was entirely right to draw our attention to this larger framework in his remarks on the Jackson amendment on Wednesday. "Not by our choice but by our capacity, our primary concern in foreign policy must be to belp influence the international conduct of nations in the world arena," he sald. "We would not welcome the intervention of other countries in our domestic affairs, and we cannot expect them to be cooperative when we seek to intervene directly in theirs." Of course the President has his forthcoming summit in Moscow in mind: he would be derelict if he did not. He does not wish to sit down in the Kremlio with his hands trussed by the Senate. But he has broader responsibilities in mind, too.

The time for compromise on the Jackson amendment is now. In the 20 months of this measure's life, we have had a full opportunity to see its possibilities and its limits. Earlier the amendment put muscle into the administration's exercise of "quiet diplomacy" to help Jewish emigration but now it puts muscle into the stance of Soviet hardliners.

Sen. Jackson has shown himself to be in this matter a man of great humanity as well as a political manager and legislative operator of rare skills. It is hard to recall another occasion when a single senator played such a sure and ample role in the shaping of an important aspect of the nation's foreign policy. But the essence of leadership Is to temper resolve with restraint and thereby to arrive at a sense of what is possible. in the immediate political context and in the broader international context. That is the test before Mr Jackson nov-

The New European Leaders

By James Reston

NEW YORK—In his latest press conference, Secretary of State Kissinger took a somewhat more optimistic line about the future relations between the United States and Europe, and said that President Nixon was planning to meet soon with the new leaders of Britain, France and West Germany.

This could be an important event, for the Europeans with Giscard in Paris, Helmut Schmidt in Bonn and Harold Wilson in London are now reappraising their relations with one another and with the United States, Accordingly this could be one of those moments in history when new men have a chance, perhaps a fleeting chance, to break away from what Rissinger called the legalistic and negative arguments of the past.

A good place to start this re-appraisal might be with the official but still private reports of Kissinger's own cooversations with the former leaders of Britain, Prance and West Germany over the last two years. This could do much to cut away the thicket of illusion and misunderstanding that poisoned transatiantic policy during the administration of Prime Minister Heath, President Pompidou and Chancellor Brandt.

Washington View

These official reports, at least as seen from Washington, do not support West Europe's suspicions of U.S. policy. They do not sustain the charges that the United States was trying to dominate Europe. or impede the unity of Europe, or make a deal with the Soviet Union at Europe's expense.

Nor do they support former Freuch Foreign Minister Michel Jobert's assertions that Kissinger was saying one thing to the Germans or the British and another thing to the French, or that he was trying to destroy Europe's independent nuclear power.

Obviously, there were differences of opinion and policy between Kissinger and Jobert, and conflicting interests of national politics, and many ambiguities of language, but still it would be interesting if the new leaders were to exchange their diplomatic correspondence on these past conversations, and review the record

Still Stand

Meanwhile, the two public U.S. proposals to Europe still stand: work out a "partnership" with Europe—as suggested in hls speeches at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York and before the Pilgrim Society in London-and his offer of a common policy to deal with the "energy crisis" and the joint development of nuclear power and other alternate sources of energy.

Maybe this view from Washington is wrong or out of focus, but whenever Washington gets in trouble—as it is now—it tends to go back to its ideals, and to reach out for compromise, peace and coocord in the world. Read Lincoln, Wilson and Roosevelt in their times of despair, and the point is clear.

Fortunately, by the accidents of history and politics, these rising new leaders of the middle genera-tion—especially Kissinger, Giscard and Schmidt-have a great deal common and may very well able to build npon the close and trustful relationships of Giscard and Schmidt.

None of these men could have imagined five years ago that he would now be in a position to deal with the great issues of world politics, let alone to preside ove the common problems of the civilization of the West at such a moment of political, monetary and military confusion and op-

But there they are, all pre-occupied with inflation and other savage political and economic problems at home, but still faced with rare opportunities to give new directions to the politics of the world.

So far they have not had a chance to get together. Kissinger has been in the Middle East for a month and will be preoccupled with President Nixon's trips to the Arab countries, Israel and the Soviet Union for the rest of June.

But later in the summer, the great question of the future of America, Europe and Japan will come to the fore. For these new leaders have already learned that they cannot solve their problems of inflation, trade, money or security separately, or protect themselve, from the rising poverty and hunger of the majority of the human race.

This is now the challenge before the new leaders, and if they can remove the suspicions of the Gaullist era, a Nixon-Wilson-Giscard-Schmidt summit meeting. might revive hope for a new transatiantic alliance.

Stonewalling Hurts

The Grand Jury's Vo

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — By agreeing to surrender the additional tape recordings subpoensed by Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, President Nixon could have kept secret the terribly damaging in-formation that a federal grand jury wanted to brand him a Watergate conspirator.

What'e more, the President was fully aware that his giving up the tapes might have kept the grand jury action secret until after House impeachment proceedings

Thus, the fact that Mr. Nixon, instand, adopted the stonewall strategy in refusing all additional tapes seems still more inexplicable and self-destructive. It suggests that either the additional tapes are too incriminating to surrende or that the White House legal defense is based on a woodenheaded stubbornness.

On Sunday, May 5, Jaworski informed Nixon defense lawyer James St. Clair what had been widely rumored but never firmly pinned down: The grand jury early this year voted unanimously to list Mr. Nixon as an unindicted co-conspirator in the Watergate cover-up but had been dissuaded by Jaworski from actually taking that step.

Tape Negotiations On that Sunday, Jaworski and

St. Clair were negotiating over tapes of 64 additional Watergaterelated conversations with high hopes by the prosecution that the White House would cooperate, If Jaworski did not have to press his subpoena in court, there would be no immediate need to list all unindicted co-conspirators or reveal the grand jury vote on Mr. Nixon. Such information need not be given to defense lawyers for Watergate cover-up defend-ants until just before their trials begin many months from now. By that time, House impeachment proceedings would probably be concluded. Purthermore, there was a chance that the information might be kept sealed indefi-

But late on the afternoon of Monday, May 6. St. Clair passed the surprising news to Jaworski that Mr. Nixon was going to stonewall on the latest tape re-quest after all. That forced a hearing on the subpoena behind closed doors May 10 in Judge John Sirica's court with all defense lawyers present. At that hearing, Jaworski revealed the unanimous grand jury vote against Mr. Nixon.

Chile Is Said To Bar Visits By Red Cross

Junta Puts Restrictions On Prisons and Camps

By Joseph Novitski

SANTIAGO, June 7 (WP)... The military government has kept an International Red Cross mission from inspecting Chile's jails and detention camps since April 30, informed sources reported Tuesday.

The mission of 14 Swiss had visited jails and detention centers regularly to observe the treatment of prisoners since last September. when a military coup ousted President Salvador Allende's Socialist government. On April 30 a government authoriza-tion for the Red Cross prison visits expired. It has not been renewed. sources close to the mission said

Inspection visits to the detention centers, set up to hold the tens of thousands of Chileans who have been detained at one time or another since the coup, have been the main work of the Red Cross mission. It has regutarly communicated its findings to the government, but those findings have never been made

But diplomats in Santiago report that the junta has apparently reacted to pressure from the Red Cross. Recently, an official said that a Red Cross report had induced the government to transfer 34 former officials from an island camp in the Strait of Magelian to four military installations near Sandago.

Dawson Island Dawson Island, where former cabinet ministers and ranking political officials were held from September until last month, is one of three known camps established by the government. The two others, called Chacabuco and Pisagua, are on the edges of the Atacama Desert in northern Chile. Two weeks ago there were about 700 men awaiting trial or interrogation at Chacabuco and somewhat more than 400 persons confined at Pisagua. The most recent official estimate revealed that more than 5,000 Chilcans were still detained without charges at these camps, as well as in jails and improvised detention centers.

Members of the Red Cross mission have visited all the known detection centers, provided some financial belp to the families of detained men and observed the military trials of former supporters of President Allende. Yesterday the mission announced a donation of 1.500 tons of powder-ed milk to Chilean government health authorities. Powdered milk is needed for feeding bables through the Southern Hemisphere winter that has been in Chile. It is expensive and in short sup-

VIENNA. Anton Bruckner-The Man, the Music

By David Stevens

VIENNA, June 7 (IRT).-Not only is almost all the music of Anton Bruckner being heard here to mark the 150th anniversary of his birth but the Na-tionalbibliothek has mounted an exhibition that both looks back on his life and work while also trying to look forward to a new evaluation of his enigmatic personality.

There are few composers whose personal lives give so few clues to their music. Bruckner, the son of a country teacher living near Line, had outwardly a life almost devoid of events, and the usual picture is of a naive, peasant-like man deeply and neurotically) religious, socially inept, and obsequiously modest. Yet, after a rigorous training in all aspects of his art that did not end until he was almost 40, he began to write and incessantly revise his series of complex and elaborately constructed symphonies.

The catalogue that goes with this exhibition—mounted by the director of the library's music collection Franz Grasherger—sug-gests that Bruckner's music was

Sayre goes on to say that those gifts of genius."

In the realm of fact, the exhibi tion also helps to put the cliché of Bruckner-the-naive in the shade by pointing out that he was well-traveled, a successful organ virtuoso and a professor at the University of Vienna.

Meanwhile, in the Musikverein, the anniversary performances of the music have been continuing at a high level. The Concertgebouw Orchestra under Bernard Haitink — Bruckner specialists whose recordings of all the sym-phonies, from "zero" to nine, is another noteworthy anniversary event—came to Vienna for two concerts that included the Fifth Symphony, Haitink's way with Bruckner is right down the mid-dle, he neither hurries nor dawdles nor sentimentalizes, and the orchestra was in rich and precise form for this contrapuntally complex work, Carlo Maria Glulini, with the Vizna Symphony, brought great intensity and forward-pressing lyricism to the Second Symphony, rousing the audience to a frenzy hut leaving some Viennese cool to what they considered an Italianate approach. Milan Horvat and the Austrian Radio Orchestra gave energetic performances of the early G-minor Overture and, with the Radio Chorus, of Psalm Wilhelm Kempff, at 79, has embarked on the great voyage through the Beethoven sonatas, which he is playing in statutory order. With an artist of his experlence, it is bound to be an interesting trip, and the Brahms Hall in the Musikverein is sold oot all the way. The first night took the veteran pianist through the first four sonatas, and while there were many beauties—notably the slow movements of Opus 2. # 'Women by Women' at Paris Center

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

DARIS, June 7 (IRT),-The -Women on Women' film festival is packing the American Cultural Center in Paris, drawing women writers, artists and film-makers, French and foreign, among them Simone de Beauvoir Agnès Varda, Ruth Franken and Nathalie Sarraute. At the festival's conclusion will be a televised round-table discussion with lead-ing literary figures participating.

The festival was organized by Esta Marshall, a documentary film-maker whose recent "Psy-chology of Photography" series has been shown on German television. The festival program consists of films about American women by women directors. While not all of the directors are Americans, all of the films were shot in the United States. The range extends from animated cartoons to the experimental, from television material and features to the underground. The program continues through Wednesday day; and many of the interesting selections are being repeated during the next few days.

Barbara Loden's ."Wanda" pictures the fate of a weak-willed woman of limited intelligence, lost when she breaks family ties.

LONDON THEATER

When Three Are Better Than One

By John Walker

LONDON, June 7 (IRT). Alan Ayckbourn's "Round and Round the Garden," the third play in his sequence of subthird play in his sequence of sub-urban comedies at the Green-wich Theatre, is as marvelously assured and as funny as his two other plays. The three together are a delightful tour de force, not the least for the ease with which the author can build laughs from the straw of everyday trivia.

While each play does stand on its own—spart from a few awk-ward moments—seen one after the other, the amusement increases since the audience then knows more about each situation than the characters and can appredate their floundering through the stagnant but dangerous backwaters of family life.

The situation in the latest play is the same as in the others: Norman (Tom Courtenay) is hoping to spend a dirty weekend with his unmarried sister-in-law An-nie (Felicity Kendal) but is thwarted by his other sister-inlaw Sarah (Penelope Kelth), and the situation is further complicated by her husband Reg (Mark Kingston), Norman's wife Ruth (Penelope Wilton) and Annie's dull, befuddled boyfriend Tom (Michael Gambon)

But the mood is slightly darker and the action depends a little more on that staple of farce, a conversation at cross purposes. The dislike each member of the family has for the others is nearer the surface and Norman is less naturalistic character, the

the other plays and more an embodiment of mischief, a sort of domesticated Puck who sabotages relationships, including his own, with deliberate bedevilment.

Mr. Courtenay's hunyant and crassy performance a garden gnome come to life brilliantly emphasizes this aspect of the play. Especially enjoyable in all three plays has been the quality of the performances and the excellence of Eric Thompson's direction. It has been a joy to watch comprehension finally dawning on Mr. Cambon five minutes too late, or Miss Keith feroclously destroying the family that she as desperately tries to

During the first two plays, there were times when I felt that the author was overstretching his material, that the furniest scenes from each play could be put together to make one brilliantly hilarious evening. I was wrong, for the comedy in each depends on the same device, basically a mistiming of cues-Mr. Gambon's limp vet taking three minutes to decide whether he wants black or white coffee and then an-nouncing his choice at precisely the wrong moment—and the sub-sequent confusion. As one play it would seem far more repetitious than as three.

. There are those who make great claims for Mr. Ayckbourn as not merely a comic playwright, but also as a serious one, as a brilliant and perceptive chronicler of suburban marriage. It is true romantic assistant librarian, of that he can convey much by little means—these are blessedly unpretentious playe with the most serious conversations being collcerned with such matters as the whereabouts of fuse wires, yet there are moments of genuine feeling, of pain, pleasure. love.

Yet basically, he is a fantasist, a comic writer in the tradition of P. G. Wodehouse, constructing a never-never land out of middle rather than upper-class materials. a little world of laughter that rarely touches reality and is all the better and funnier for that.

At the Round House, Pierre Cardin presents Prancois Billetdoux's "Les Veuves" in a Frenchlanguage production of the play that was seen at the Espace Ca:din in Paris in October, 1972. Although Olivier Husecuot is eloquent in the main role, the play itself is a tiny, enigmatic fable about an old man's return to the village of his youth inhabited solely by women, widows and their servants.

But it has a strange and magical power due to the use of huge puppets that play the part the widows; they are 8-feettall dolls, nothing more than black robes surmounted mournful, black-eyed faces of an Easter Island impassivity. They are carried and manipulated quite openly by actors. Yet, some-how they not only take on a half life of their own, an cerie supernatural quality, but a relationship develops between them and their manipulators that lifts the entertainment out of the or-dinary. It is these shaman marionettes of Jacques Voyet which are the stars.

On Monday, Tom Stoppard's "Travesties"—his first work for the Royal Shakespeare Company -receives its world premiere at the Aldwych Theatre. It is set in Zurich during World War I when Lenin was planning revolution, James Joyce was writing "Ulysses" and Tristan Tzerz was beginning the dadaist movement. The cast includes John Wood, John Hurt, Tom Bell, Frank Windsor and Barbara Leigh-Hunt, and it is directed by Peter Wood,

On Monday at the Almost Free Theatre, Mike Stott's "Lenz" opens, based on the short story by Georg Buchner of a talented bot increasingly insene young man who arrives unexpectedly at the house of a country pastor and stays for three weeks.

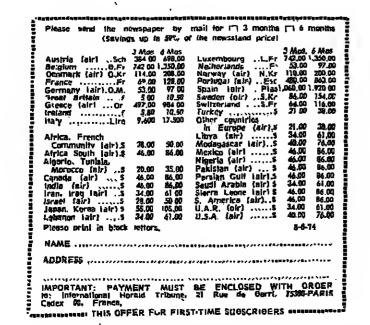

On Tuesday, at the Institute of Contemporary Art: Terrore Theatre there opens "A Calebra-tion of Summer," described as "a sung play on the edge of mus?, theater and opera, with muse by Robert Keaoe and test by

On Tuesday, at the Theatre On Tuesday, as the Upstairs, there is "A Worthy a Guest," a first play by the averwinning novelist Paul Eatley. The play, about a man in prison, will be directed by Ann Jellicoe.

Next was in my opinion, the best work in the sale, another spearhead of beautiful shape with a deep bluish green patina and the smooth feet that cast bronze from that period sometimes has. This was a real rarity not because of the shape, a well-known type—but because of the marvelous state of preserva-tion. This spearhead had the aesthetic appeal of pure abstract shapes. The price was 986 francs. Something of an anticlimax were three ribbed bracelets which of these low prices, one must re-member that this was the first auction of the season including Celtic items excavated in France, The expert, Charles Ratton, who has been in the field for some 40 years-and is incidentally known the world over as probably the finest connoisseur of African and South Seas art—says that he hasn't sold any Ceitic art "for years."

One Celtic bronze that sold for a "high" price-2,350 franca -was a small statue, identified by Ratton as a standing figure of the god Dionysios. It belonged according to Ratton's catalogue notes, to the Roman period in France. The bronze looked in miliar with its "Roman" style Ratton's presale estimate for th piece was 3,460 francs-so th final price was more than 1.00 francs under the estimate. ### 17 Authors Seek Wider Contacts In Europe

BONN, June 7 (Reuters).— Nobel Prize-winning West Ger-nan novelist Hemrich Böll sued an appeal yesterday to he Geneva Conference on Euroean Security for improvement a cultural and intellectual conts among people in the 35 participating countries.

The appeal, signed by 17 authors, said that there would be no lasting security in Europe without more intensive, restricted exchange.

on of the ominous numinous and fearful events of an innerworld, remains practically unknown in France. The present exhibition, assembling a good number of excellent works, represents a first attempt to correct this situation. Kubin had an almost inexhaustible stere of images giving expression to such feelings as terror and guilt strangely interwoven with frony and humor, Fissil comes to mind, so do E.A. Poe, occasionally Goys, and frequently Max Klinger and Oddion Redon whom Kubin admired. The martyrdom and sexual repression of childhood and the horror of adult emotions surrounding death are the underlying themes of much of his work. His style is extraordinarily tense, uncluttered and eloquent entirely personal too, and uninfluenced by fashlons and schools, and while his vision is intensely personal too (as is Goya's in his visionary works), he succeeds in making us enter into his world

Rome

Gregory Gillespie, Paintings from 1972-1974, Fante Di Spade, 254 Via Ripetta, Rome, through June.

Gillespie's reality is extraordinary, the more he deals with the ordinary. The kitchens, porches, empty lots, catered family parties and street events of northwestern Massachusetts become cool hallucinatory images under his brush. Inanimate surfaces are worked over with such intensity that they turn animate. While human flesh is hard and polished; wooden slats open their acars, stones sweat, sinister decomposition occes from shadows. It is as if Gillespie tried to out-stare the phenomena of the world before him, with pugnaciousness and with wonder, like an innocent who refuses to be frightened by the mexplicable. Instead of painting splendor in which birks decay, he attacks decay in search of splendor, He is possessed by a passion for the materiality of things. Denth looms under the phosphorescent green of a landscape, the metal hardness of human limbs, while resurrection heaves from splintering wood and the mildewed rubbish.

His color always fits the object: on the drainboard near a red rimmed box stands a half Richard Trythall.

soup, just the right kind of greenish yellow. Old black tires, blue rubber balls, a red party ers today. dress, pinkish slime, sour green black and white. In technique Gillespie owes much to Antoniello da Messina, Bosch, Breughel and other Renaissance masters but his outlook is thoroughly contemporary.

He used photography long before photorealism became known. Born in New Jersey in 1936 he came to Italy on a Pulhright fellowship in 1962 and then, after winning the Prix de Rome twice. as a fellow showed paintings at the American Academy in Rome (IHT, Dec, 1969). His "pornographic" nudes and odd gaudy Italian interiors then had a shocking clear and brilliant edge of violence. Though this bracing tension has relaxed since his return to the United States.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Pan Am, TWA Talks Collapse

Pan American World Airways and Trans World Airlines have announced the collapse of government-approved talks on consolidation of some or all their transatiantic services. The airlines, nation's two largest international operators. had requested and obtained the Civil Aeronautics Board's permission to bold the talks to help offset styrocketing fuel prices. The permission was needed because of anti-trust laws. Still pending before the board are requests by each carrier subsidy payments to offset fuel costs and bills have been introduced in the House to provide payments to make up for fuel price increases. Chances that direct subsidy would come either from the board or from Congress are considered by most qualified observers to be very

Burmah Oil Profits Up 50 Percent

Burmah Oil Ltd. profits so far this year are about 50 percent abead of a year ago, according to unaudited results, chairman J.A. Lumsden told the annual meeting. But the rate of improvement, he warned, may not be maintained for the full first half. Mr. Lumsden said that profits for the second half are likely to exceed the first six months, although not to the same extent as last year. Net operating profit over the whole of 1973 rose £22.5 million to £48.7

The original plan for the development of a 150-180-se a jetliner with a short range of about 1,500 index is now considered unworkable as the world market is mainly for medium-range larger copacity aircraft with a range of shout 2.875 miles which is more economical on fact.

Matsushita Cuts TV Production

Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. has been curtailing color television production operations by 10 to 15 percent since last month. Matsushita says this is due mainly to a slowdown in domestic sales stemming from the government's demand that management take measures to curb price spirals and credit pressure. Matsushita adds, however, that color TV sales began showing signs of recovering slowly earlier this

Alaska Line Capacity May Double

British Petroleum Ltd. says the partners in Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., the company which will build and operate the trans-Alaska pipeline, are considering doubling initial capacity of the ime to 1.2 million barrels a day. To provide this canacity, it is currently estimated, will cost more than 54 billion, BP says. The move to speed up the development of the pipeline's capacity stems from the U.S. energy shortage and the need to make the most economic use of the line, BP adds. As a result of the move, BP says it and its U.S. associate, Sohio, empect to increase their share in Alveska to about 50 percept. At present Sohio holds 28 percent. Under the new arrangements, its stake is expected to rise to 34 percept while BP would take about a 16 per-

Italy's Gold Problem

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., June 7 (Reuters) .- Italy's problem of unfreezing its gold reserves is re-garded as urgent by senior European monetary officials here. The officials, attending the International Monetary Conference. see this as the pivotal point in trying to reach agreement on the gold price issue. They noted that the European Economic Community wants U.S. acquiescence to the idea that Common Market central banks should be able to buy gold from each other at market-related prices while retaining the generally acceptable option of being able to sell on the free market

if they so desired. If this proved acceptable then Italy would be in a position, in effect, to piedge its gold as collateral against ioans.

The European officials indicated that there is a strong possibility the Common Market might go ahead with its gold plan, even if full U.S. approval is not obtained, because of the political desirability of such a move.

Citibank Cuts Prime Rate to 11.25 Percent

NEW YORK, June 7 (Reuters). —In a move that many dealers believe will have a profound near-term impact on bond and securities markets, First National City Bank announced today it will reduce its floating prime rate to 11 1/4 percent from 11 1, 2 percent effective today.

The move was widely anticipated on Wall Street, especially after banking statistics for the latest statement week showed a sizable $209-million decline in business loans for the period. Part of yesterday's stock market advance was attributed to anticipation of such a move, especially after two smaller banks lowered their rates during the The $209-million decline in business loans at New York banks was included in the Federal Reserve Bank of New York's weekly banking report. The figures show that the average rate for 90-day dealer placed commercial paper, a major determinant in Citibank's rate calculation, rose during the latest statement week to 10.70 percent from 10.41 percent a week earlier. However, the three-week moving average, which Citibank utilizes, declined to 10.67 percent. low enough to lead Citibank to cut its floating prime rate.

The figures also showed that commercial paper sales for the week ended May 29 fell $1.076 billion, the first decline since the week ended May 1, when sales were off $1.301 billion.

The figures also showed a $70million decline in outstanding certificates of deposit at New York reporting banks, but apparently the banks were not looking too eggressively to raise holdings as the Fed reported a drop in the average CD rate to 11.05

Finally, there is the atmosphere of presidential pointes in the 1970s, to which the story inevitably addresses itself. It may not be true that the man on whom Pro-ident Tim Kegao is roughly based made deals with the rich and powerful. It may not be true that America is run by a small. conspiring oligarchy. It may not be true that things happen in the White House at the whim of movie stars and labor leaders, of courtesans and generals. But the possibilities are ao longer inconceivable. At the very least, Mr. Condon gratifies our paranoia.

In short. "Winter Kills" is grand entertainment. If ory only complaint is that I caught on too early what the unimate outcome "ould be. I can les it pass bemuse there are so many surpris-my trists before that outcome is realized. For my money, this is the best book Mr. Condon has notion since "The Manchurian Candidate." The Limes have caught no with him, or vice versa, end I'm happy to be on his fanwagon once again.

"I didn't miss many shots," Ashe said. 'But he doesn't hit hard, and it's just a case of outlasting him."

Following Garman's second-round defeat and Stan Smith's loss in the first round, Ashe, Marty Riessen and Eddie Dibbs are the only American seeds left. Two unseeded U.S. players. Davis Cuppers Erik Van Dillen and Harold Solomon, have also made to the third round.

The third of the seeded American players to lose was Brian Gottfried. Onny Parun of New Zealand rallied in the second set of his match with Gottfried and came back from 1-6, 3-5 to win, 1-6, 7-6, 6-4. In the biggest upset yet in the brilliant mare Banquet Belie captured the Everglades Stakes at Hisleah this winter, finished close up in several rich stakes came from last place to be fifth in the Kentucky Derby, then won the Preakness by seven lengths in fast time without ever getting nif the rail. No. 2 is the post position from which the Derby and Preakness winners started this spring, so Rondinello was not upset when Little Current drew that post. "Not that it matters much." he said, "Miguel [Rivers, the jockey] will have this horse far back, as

Early Pace

Covered Portage may have been entered to help patrol the early pace, a critical factor to the outcome of any 12-furlong event. It is likely, however, that Little Current's running mate will be acratched—unless one or two of the other speed horses should be withdrawn,

"I was pleased to see Jolly John ship in from Delaware," Rondinello said. "He and Hudson County are the speed. They should help make Little Current's late charge more effective."

Pancho Martin undoubtedly was thinking much like Rondinello when be entered Accipiter. This is a top miler which, like Covered Portage, may be scratched if Jolly John and Hudson County go postward.

El Espanoleta also could come out if the speed stays in. Trainer Laz Barrera believes Bold and Fancy has a chance of winning if the pace is honest. El Espanoleta has been a standout runner in Puerto Rico, while merely a good horse in the United States Pace has been a critical factor in the 1974 Triple Crown races. The speed held up so well in the Derby that the speedy Hudson County could hang on for second place. But the early leaders, except for Jolly John (fourth), were not prominent at the finish of the Preakness.

The Belmont, billed as "the test of the champion." supposedly stresses bloodlines and stamina. If so, Rondinello and Darby Danowner Juhn Galbreath are sitting pretty. Much of the opposition consists of milers trying a mile and a half, while Little Current has the pedigree of a genuine

10-Cent Beer-the Drink That Made Cleveland Infamous

By Dave Anderson

NEW YORK, June 7 thYT .- Sureir the nation needs a good 5-cent cigar, but baseball doesn't neen

When the Cleveland Indians advertised beer for dime Tuesday night. 23,134 customers responded. Since the Indians haven't been worth much more than 10 cents in the 20 years since they last won an American League pennant, the beer obviously was the attraction, not the game.

By the rinth inning, the beer had lost its head. So had some consumers. What were described as "hundreds of faus" swarmed onto the field at Municipal Stadium, turning a 5-5 game with the Texas Rangers into a 9-0 loss for the Indians, by Whatever brand it was that the Indians dispensed for a dime, it's now the beer that made Cleveland infamous. But hopefully it will be the beer that alerts the baseball establishment to reinforce its crowd-control measures before a tragedy occurs. Baseball seems to attract the rowdies and the vandals. Once the grass of a major league ball-park was a sacred preserve. But the TV cameras influenced teenagers to run on the field, hoping they'd be seen. Even though TV no longer focuses on the showoffs, the fad has persisted, and in Cleveland they ran in packs.

Too Intimidating

In basketball, the players are too tail, too intunudating. In hockey, the players are surround-ed by protective glass. They're also carrying sucks. Boxing attracts rowdies, but they don't storm the ring until after the punches have stopped. Baseball occasionally has a problem after a game ends, as it did at Shea Stadium last year when the New York Mets eliminated the Cincinnati Reds in the National League playoff. But most baseball episodes occur during games. Not leng ago, Bob Watson of the Houston Astros, dared and bleeding after running into the leftfield fence at Cinchnati, had beer poured on him by

"When the cops tried to get one guy out of there." Pete Rose recalled today. "he was so drunk.

they couldn't even move him. His body just kept sagging."

Pole Rose is the resident expert on baseball rowdies from coast to coast, mostly because be has been the resident target. Following a brawl at second base with Bud Barrelson of the New York Mets in the playoffs last year, he had a few bottles thrown at him from Shea's leftfleld stands. of the Harrelson episode.

usual things. I mean an obscene chant in leftfield that could be heard in our dugout behind first base. And one guy was saying terrible things about my mother. That's not baseball."

Speciators. "It's a lot easier to go to the ballpark and yell those things." the Cincinnati leftfielder said. "But Philadelphia somebody was throwing little flashlight batteries. The umpire at first base had to put on a batting belmet."

ball incident as a factor in the Tuesday night episode. "Bul selling beer for 10 cents ain't too smart either," he said. "If a guy was smart, he'd stay outside the gate and sell aspirin for a nickel less. But the big thing is, the penalties aren't stiff enough for people. They know that even if they run on the field, nothing is golog to happen. And the owners will wait until some player gets hurt or some fan gets hurt."

The primary problem is that ballpark security policemen don't do their job. Not because they don't want to, but because they're intimidated by the thought of becoming involved in a possible court case. It's easier for them to let people run wild or to let them yell anything they want than it is to stop them.

Somehow baseball players appear harmless to run among, perhaps because they usually are standing still. In football, the aibletes are too violent. Once in Baltimore, a teenager sprinted onto the field between plays, snatched the ball and ran for the sideline. # Profits on Watergate dustries held its annual etockholders meeting at the federal courthouse in Washingtoo last week, and Sherlock Springbinder, the chairman of the board, reported a windfall profit of $2 billion. Watergate Industries is a conglomerate that deals in all aspects of the Watergate affair from providing legal taleot to selling memoirs of Watergate personalities. Mr. Springbioder told the happy stockhold-"The Way thiogs are going, Watergate should be one of the growth stocks of 1974. The legal profes-

"Our book division is also showing a great profit. We estimate that everyone involved in Watergate, from John Dean to the mail-room boy at the Committee for the Re-Election of the President, will have a nonfiction or fiction book out by next Christmas. If you include newspapermen, defendants, prosecutors, former White House personnel, former attorneys general, milk producers, ex-CIA men, secretaries and grand-jury foremen, we believe there will be 670,000 books published this year, and the ao-

"The movie rights for Water-gate are going very briskly. Robert Redford is working on 'All the President's Men, and several other movie producers are readying projects, including 'Gidget Goes to the Watergate.' Last Tango at the White House," The Tapes of Wrath," Lassie at the Supreme Court. The Life of Bebe Rebozo' and 'Confessions of a Jesuit Priest.

"Watergate Industries has bought four movie studios, and we now have a record division, where we inteod to prodoce the hit expletives from the transcripts."

Springhinder continued: "We also plan to go into TV in a hig way if the impeachment trial takes place. We will prodoce 'Monday Night at the Senate' with Howard Cosell and Frack Gifford, To Tell the Truth, with Richard Nixon, 'I have a Secret,' starring Gordon Liddy, and The Six Million Dollar Man, with Maurice Stans.

"Watergate Industries is happy to announce it is going into the employment - a gency business, since it is estimated that there v. ill be 345.890 White House aides looking for jobs in the next 12 mouths.

"Our coogressional subpoena printing plant is now working 24 hours a day, and we just received a multimillioo-dollar contract from the House Judiciary Committee which should keep us busy for two more years."

Springbinder got a standing ovation. "Are there aoy questions?" he asked. "Why aren't there more women involved with Watergate?" a militant stockholder shouted from the floor.

Springbinder answered nervously. "It's true that Watergate was strictly a white, male affair, with very few exceptions. We tried to find women who could become involved, but there just weren't any who were qualified. Women don't seem to be physiologically or mentally able to cope with all it takes to be part of a Water-gate scandal." Mary Blune

The French Take to Provinces

DARIS (IHT).-It may be a genuine return to the earth, it may be the French conviction that real estate is the only safe investment. At any rate, more and more city folk are interested in the provinces they used to scorn.

One of the side effects has been a surge of interest in local French tradition and folklore. an interest that will take definite form next week at the first Salon Français du Livre Regional, to be held June 14-16 in Anjou, 300 kilometers southwest of Paris.

The book fair, under the leadership of Daniel Couturier. a young Angevin by adoption, will include publishers big and small, writers, secondhand book dealers, printers, artists, anyooe interested io his or her region. "We've already received a mouotain of books from all over France," said Mr. Couturier on a quick trip to Paris to distribute posters for the fair which were designed by the man who does meous for the liner France.

Would-be exhibitors pay a small sum io return for which they get a table. They can put whatever they want on their tables. That's what's fun, letting people be free!"
Mr. Couturier, who seems to end each phrase with an enthusiastic exclamation point. looks like a bearded medieval chevalier despite his managerial blue blazer, gray flannels and superbly organized oriefcase He also wears astounding valler shoes. He sells shoes four months a year in Germany and Switzerland, then retires to his 13th-century house in Longué, near Saumur,

"My daughter plays the plano and I play the violin," he says.

"And I am able to walk in my four times a day and fishermen and farmers look at the weathervane first thing each garden with a book. How many people can do that?" Mr. Conturier's studies of Anjou have been conducted Mr. Conturier's own roof more in a spirit of joy and has a cock weathervane, the poetry than strict scholarship. "Regionalism implies a search most traditional, supposedly a sign of vigilance. But he plans to have lots more, made hy modern sculptors, all of whom are crazy about the idea. People love weathervanes with-For his book fair next week out even realizing it," he says. Mr. Cooturier plans a Salon of the Weathervane in Paris, wito modern weathervanes which could perhans then be reproduced to lighten the terrible banality of French residences secondaires.

> Strictly speaking, a weathervane indicates the direction of the wind. Although they probably existed in Roman times, early French examples date from the Middle Ages. They can be found in antique stores, but good ooes, says Mr. Couturier, are rare because no owner will sell one until it falls from its perch.

> According to Mr. Couturier. weathervanes were first awarded, rather like medals, to sol-diers who led an assault and were the first to plant their pennants an enemy ramparis. They remained a privilege until the Revolution decreed that everyone could have one. Before that, in the 17th century, says Mr. Couturier, there were memorable trials of people who had usurped the privilege.

> The weatheryanes in his part of the country that Mr. Conturier loves were made by locals often to indicate their professions—a sailor at the

One of the finest weathervanes of the area was made by an old man, Père Houot, a stranger who came to Anjou all the way from the Vosges in eastern France and made a weathervane showing the pine forests of his birthplace, the jolly companions of his youth, and a shepherd brooding over a fire and gazing, perhaps toward Anjou and the future. Because he fears that the detail might be lost if the weathervane were put on his roof, Pere Houot has fixed it over his door.

As soon as Mr. Couturier's modest little booklet came out. tourists appeared to inspect local weathervanes and to ask probing questions, Poor Père Houot had to write a quick note to Mr. Couturier, begging for a quick lesson in weathervane history and technique ao he wouldn't be caught short.

The success of the booklet, oow out of print, would seem to confirm Mr. Couturier's view that there is more interest in regional literature than people suspect. There is even profit in it, though not neces-sarily for the author. Mr. Couturier sold his weathervane booklet for 20 france in 1972 and the other day saw it listed in a second-hand dealer's catalogue for 70 francs, a tidy markup. As we say, even without weathervanes, it's an ill

This photo was used to illustrate a recent column by John Snell poking fun at beauty contests Mrs. Cheap, now a high school teacher in Snohomish, Wash, said through her attorney that the article was libelous, slander-ous and made her the subject of ridicule among her students. She threatened a $1,000 libel suit unless the Daily agree to turn over the responsible person to be hit with a custard pie. So on Wednesday afternoon, Snell Mc-Garry and Mrs. Cheap held a brief ceremony outside the com-munications building. Snell was wearing a bathing suit, flippers and a T-shirt emblazoned with the words "Daily Libel Team," "If this makes her feel better," said Snell, "it's cool."
